

Four Ogier lawyers named in Citywealth's Top 100 Future Leaders list

News - 02/06/2017

Four of Ogier's lawyers have been named in Citywealth's Top 100 Future Leaders list, recognising rising stars in the private client world.

Managing associate Josephine Howe and senior associate Sevyn Kalsi from the Jersey Private Client and Trusts team, and associates Fraser Allister and Michael Rogers from Ogier's Cayman and Guernsey teams respectively, have been included in the list that recognises leading advisers in the private client world aged under 40.

Feedback quoted in the list notes that Josephine played a leading role in the adoption of Ogier's new CSR policy and that she chairs the firm's green committee - the feedback also described Sevyn as a "much-valued member of the team" whose Spanish language skills are an asset when dealing with South American clients, praised Fraser as "an exceptionally talented attorney" and noted that Michael's significant experience had strengthened the firm's offering in restructuring and insolvency work.

Sally Edwards, Ogier's Global Head of Private Client and Trusts, said: "We are very pleased at this recognition of some of the rising stars on our team.

"Josephine, Sevyn, Fraser and Michael are talented and diligent professionals who have great futures ahead of them.

"Since the start of the year we have added three partners in our Private Client and Trusts teams in Jersey, Guernsey and Cayman, along with several hires at associate and senior associate level, and we see this as a significant growth area for the firm."
