

Jordan Constable named Lawyer of the Year

Insights - 17/11/2022

Ogier associate Jordan Constable took home gold at the Citywealth Future Leaders Awards last night, where he was named lawyer of the year in the IFC associate category.

Judges referred to the high-profile and high-value trust cases Jordan has worked on in the past 12 months, alongside his significant contribution to both the culture of the Ogier office and to the wider legal profession.

The award follows Jordan being named a key lawyer in the latest Legal 500 Caribbean Guide.

Global head of trust disputes and global senior partner Rachael Reynolds KC said:

"Jordan's positive attitude as well as his excellent technical skill make this award truly well deserved. He is an invaluable member of the team, and supports senior team members on complex cases at a level that goes well beyond what would be expected of someone of his PQE.

"He adds value to whatever matter he is involved with, and does so with an impressive 'can-do' attitude. Jordan is eager to learn, puts himself forward for opportunities which pull him out of his comfort zone and plays a key role in the culture and life of the firm.

"We know that a successful lawyer can't just rely on technical ability, they also need to be effective in business development, marketing, client care and in spotting new opportunities by taking an entrepreneurial, curious and genuinely innovative approach to their work. It's these elements that distinguish excellent from good, and Jordan has them in abundance."
